April 8, 2014, Denver - From the stage of the Denver Auto Show Charity Preview, the 2014 Jeep® Cherokee has been named the “SUV of the Year” by the voting media members of the Rocky Mountain Automotive Press (RMAP) association.

"The Rocky Mountain region challenges any vehicle to the maximum with high altitude and constantly changing weather conditions," said Andre Smirnov, Rocky Mountain Automotive Press president. "The 2014 Jeep Cherokee is equipped to handle this tough environment, while also offering comfort, utility, and efficiency. RMAP is pleased to recognize the Jeep Cherokee as the 2014 Rocky Mountain 'SUV of the Year.'"

The 2014 Jeep Cherokee was chosen “SUV of the Year” after evaluation by RMAP members. The field included every significant new SUV and crossover vehicle for sale in the region, which includes Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming. RMAP is a Denver-based association of automotive journalists, automaker-communications representatives and other motor-industry professionals. This is the eighth year RMAP has presented its Rocky Mountain Vehicle of the Year awards, which recognize the industry’s top cars, pickups and SUVs.

"The rugged terrain and varying weather conditions of the Rocky Mountain region make this award extra special and a natural fit for the all-new Jeep Cherokee," said Mike Manley, President and CEO – Jeep Brand, Chrysler Group LLC. "Jeep Cherokee has been a tremendous success in the marketplace since its arrival in Jeep showrooms last fall. We are grateful that, like consumers nationwide, the RMAP members have recognized the benchmark Jeep capability, world-class on-road dynamics, efficiency, innovation and craftsmanship that Cherokee offers."
